

Veterans, reservists, Service leavers and military family members are invited to a three-part webinar series showcasing accessible career routes across health and social care.

Taking place from 20 to 22 October, "Pathways into Health and Social Care", hosted by the Forces Employment Charity, will connect the Armed Forces community with forces-friendly employers in the NHS, social care, and pharmaceutical and healthcare support sectors.

The event is part of the Op ASCEND government-funded programme that supports veterans and their families into employment.

During these free online sessions, those attending will explore clinical and non-clinical roles, discover how military skills transfer to civilian careers, and speak directly to organisations that value military experience.

Featured employers include Agin Care, East of England Ambulance Service, Cygnet Healthcare, GlaxoSmithKline, Milton Keynes University Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, Public Service Delivery Scotland, and St John Ambulance. More organisations will join throughout the week.

You can register for individual sessions or the full series.

For full details and the registration link visit:

National webinar series connects Armed Forces community with health and social care careers

The Forces Employment Charity was officially established in May 2022 through the merger of two long-standing military employment organisations: the Regular Forces Employment Association (RFEA) and the Officers' Association.